

Clarence Darrow's Sarcasm.

Clarence S. Darrow, the Chicago lawyer, addressed a meeting in Philadelphia the other evening on "Tolstol the Man." He expounded his views on socialism in epigrammatic style, as may be gathered from these sentences: "It is vulgar for a rich man to work. If he did work people would think he wasn't rich. There are very very few rich men in jail. Having money, there are other places for them to go. Most prisons have chapels so a convict can be a Christian for an hour once a week. I am reconciled to death, because I am sure the rich will not have their pick of things in the other world."
